

Bulldozers Save Day

Bulldozers operated by determined crews won a battle last night to plow a firebreak across the advancing front of the runaway Goldstream watershed fire before the charging forest blaze could engulf more valuable timber. It was believed the 100-foot-wide firebreak would halt the blaze unless strong winds plagued firefighters.—(B.C. Forest Service photo.)

Indian Senator:

'Give My People Big New Deal'

OTTAWA (CP)—A 70-year-old Blackfoot Indian called on Senators Vincent Dupuis (L.) the federal government Wednesday to give his people a vast new deal for his people.

Senator James Jim Gladstone, Canada's first Indian senator, told the upper house that if Canada can help underdeveloped countries and distressed people it can assist Canada's Indians.

"If we are to become a success in anything today, we must be properly educated, not only in academic subjects but in learning the life of the white man today."

Senator Gladstone, a Progressive Conservative and successful rancher from Cardston, Alta., also urged the government to investigate the possibility of subsidizing the Indians trapping in Northern Canada. Indian trappers could not exist on present fur prices. The slight, grey-haired senator hit hard at some federal regulations on grounds that they discourage Indians from farming and ranching. So much responsibility had been taken away from Indians by federal Indian agents that many progressive Indians had lost initiative and confidence.

100 Acres Of Timber Destroyed

A roaring three-day Goldstream watershed fire about 12 miles from Victoria was reported almost under control early today after burning over more than 100 acres of timberland.

Nine bulldozer operators won a dangerous race to complete two miles of 100-foot wide firebreak ahead of the westward moving blaze.

INJURY RISKED

The cat drivers risked injury to gouge out the fire guard in breakneck territory "fit only for a goat."

Today water tanks were being moved in at intervals along the firebreak cleared by the bulldozers and fire fighters planned to wet down the area if the fire showed signs of jumping the track and racing away again.

The blaze slowed down late yesterday as winds dropped after doubling the burned area from 50 acres to 100 between Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning.

WINDS FEARED

Firefighters had feared winds might spring up to impel the blaze forward before the fire guard could be completed in a pincer movement by the lumbering bulldozers.

Personal Sincerity

President Scores

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—President Eisenhower scored a smashing personal hit yesterday at the opening session of the United Nations emergency meeting on the Middle East crisis.

The projected sincerity that is the Eisenhower trademark shone through one of the best speeches Eisenhower has ever made in his life. It brought the world assembly to its feet in a standing ovation when he finished.

This was not a time to call him "Ike," for the president was stern and solemn and tough. But at the same time he was relaxed, and the tortured grammar that is another Eisenhower trademark was at a minimum. His voice was vigorous and dramatic.

In the corridors and lobbies afterward the reaction to Eisenhower's speech was warmly approving—with exceptions.

One of these exceptions was Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who did not clap but stood silently while those around applauded at the conclusion of the half-hour address. Within 15 minutes Gromyko was on the rostrum, his heavy Russian voice denouncing American "armed intervention" in Lebanon.

It was not yet 1 p.m. when the first session adjourned for the day. Whether the "General Assembly" meeting was to wind up in a welter of propaganda was yet to be seen. But Dwight D. Eisenhower had carried the day at the outset.

Both Sides Favor Long Range Plans

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Russia and the United States, despite their renewal of charges and counter-charges over each other's actions in the Middle East, created an air of reason as the United Nations emergency assembly debate on tensions in the Arab world opened Wednesday.

Stripped of the mutual accusations by President Eisenhower and Foreign Minister Gromyko of peace-endangering, the Russian and American positions at the special session's outset were interpreted at the UN generally this way:

MAKE A START

The U.S. wants a start made on a comprehensive plan for the strategic and crisis-ridden area involving a standby UN peace force and an internationally sponsored financial aid program to bring political and economic stability to the Arab world.

Russia wants British and American troops withdrawn from Jordan and Lebanon as a necessary prelude to any long-range planning, but is willing to enter discussions on terms of the withdrawal and wants the UN to play a major part.

UN FEELING

While some Western sources felt that Russia's conciliatory attitude might be only a propaganda play for support among neutral members as well as the Arab-Asia bloc in any assembly vote, there was a widespread feeling expressed that Moscow ought to be taken at its word while its conciliatory approach lasts.

Nikita Khrushchev's foreign minister concluded his speech by declaring that Russia stands ready to review the situation in official negotiations with the U.S. Britain or any other interested power during this current emergency session.

MILD RESOLUTION

This topped off the relatively mild resolution for the assembly tabled by Gromyko calling for withdrawal of the American and British troops.

This Russian-created deadlock led to the calling of the emergency session of the 81-country General Assembly after the alternative idea of a big-power summit meeting succumbed to a series of Khrushchev policy switches.

ANIMOSITY SHOWS

There was plenty of evidence in Wednesday's speeches that the antagonism over the troop intervention and the scuttling of the summit idea is as strong as ever. Eisenhower to some extent and Gromyko in most of his speech kept up the running battle that has marked Russian-American exchanges at the UN during the more than a decade of cold war.

What was new in the two speeches created the most interest, however, and left a generally favorable atmosphere for continuation of debate which resumes this morning and may last 10 days to two weeks.

CANADA AT WORK

It was learned that Canada is examining the possibility of a series of resolutions for the assembly, each dealing with a separate facet of the Middle East situation. One would deal with economic aspects, another with political stability and a

Policy Wins Truman Nod

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI)—Former president Harry S. Truman continued to back President Eisenhower in Middle East policy.

Truman praised Eisenhower's UN speech, calling it "a good constructive speech on which I hope the United Nations assembly will act immediately." Earlier, when Eisenhower sent troops into the erupting Middle East, Truman said, "It was the only thing he could do. The peace of the world is at stake."

LONDON (AP)—British newspapers greeted Eisenhower's six-point program for the Middle East favorably although there are warnings it may have come too late.

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said the address by Eisenhower offered a hopeful prospect.

CAIRO (UPI)—President Eisenhower's Middle East plan got a cool and even angry reception here on the ground that the United States should have consulted President Gamal Abdel Nasser before putting forward such a plan.

LONDON (CP)—Officials said Wednesday night Britain has pledged full support for President Eisenhower's Middle East peace plan.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Spritely, 77-year-old John Emerson played his harmonica early Wednesday while his $20,000 house burned.

He delighted spectators with such tunes as "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Marching Through Georgia."

Said Emerson: "If Nero could do it, so can I."

He raced to turn in the alarm and rouse his tenants. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Westley and their six-months-old daughter were still asleep in the smoke-filled house. Firemen credit the land lord's shouts with saving their lives.

When there was nothing else he could do Emerson decided to entertain with his mouth organ and rouse his tenants. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Westley and their six-

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore.

The human eye is a feeble instrument, after all. It sees only one kind of radiation, which we call "light."

The eye cannot detect what the universe is made of, any more than a toy piano can play a symphony.

So Fred L. Whipple, astronomer, points out in the Saturday Evening Post.

A toy piano has notes through an octave; a grown-up piano has seven. The eye picks up one octave of radiated energy. There are 59 octaves to which it is blind—All objects in the universe radiate energy. The earth's atmosphere, which looks so clear to the eye, is in fact a curtain which shuts off most radiation.

Through a billion years of adjustment, living beings have developed eyes that are sensitive to just those forms of radiation that penetrate the air.

We can't see X-rays and radio waves, but they exist. They belong to the same scale of radiation that "light" belongs to.

Radio waves from outer space illuminate an area of the universe which our eyes cannot penetrate.

Most Is Darkness

But most of the universe still remains dark to us. We will see far more of it, Whipple says, when rockets and space stations give us an electronic eye in the sky beyond the obscuring curtain of air.

Then we may be able to tell—as we never can do behind our curtain—whether or not there is likely to be life on Mars and Venus. We may find a clue to what the universe is made of, and how it runs. Our senses and our instruments are too weak and fogged-over to inform us for certain of these things.

We may send robots to the moon and planets with television cameras for eyes.

The new eyes in space will command flaming landscapes of unimagined beauty. But we will never truly "see" more than a fraction of the billions of lights and forces in the universe, although we may reduce them to mathematical formulae. Our eyes and our wits are too small to absorb them.

Perhaps science will one day confirm what some of us now suspect—that the only people who dimly perceive the real nature of the universe are the mystics and the painters of pictures that look like nothing on earth.

Further one with the withdrawal question.

External Affairs Minister Sidney Smith had an afternoon conference with the secretary-general—their second in 24 hours—and the Canadian minister Wednesday night was reported sounding out a number of middle-power delegations on the multi-resolution idea.

MODIFICATIONS

Canada was understood to feel that while the Russian proposal was reasonable enough, it needed some technical modifications in its wording and in any event the U.S. would hardly vote for a Soviet-sponsored withdrawal call.

was increased to 110 in the afternoon. Most of the men conscripted to fight the fire were released yesterday.

However, forest officials were still looking last night for experienced fallers with their own power saws to clean up the bottom of the fire-blackened area.

A 15-acre brush and forest fire which broke out at Langford and Colwood about the same time as the Goldstream Park blaze Tuesday was in the "smoking up" stage by yesterday morning.

A crew of men was left to guard against further outbreaks last night.

RAIN IN NORTH
Winds could not only fan the still fiercer flames but they could also blow away rain clouds expected overnight.

Rain fell on the north end of Vancouver Island and the north-west corner of the mainland near Smithers, Tuesday night and the cloud storms were expected to spread into the Prince George district and over the southern part of the Island, bringing showers.

Although the weather picture generally looked encouraging last night, there was also an indication that winds would rise.

TOTAL OF 357

A total of 357 fires were burning in British Columbia yesterday afternoon, including 42 new ones. Most of the fires were under control. Some 2,500 men were employed fighting the fires.

Lord Mayor's Advice:

'Go West Young Man'

Sir Denis Truscott, the Lord Mayor of London, believes in the old saying of "go west, young man."

He told an overflow audience of the Men's and Women's Canadian Clubs yesterday that in any young man in England was not sure what he should do with his life, he would tell him:

"If you have the guts and determination... go forth in the flush of early manhood to the vigorous and thriving land of Canada."

Several hundred members crowded into the Empress Hotel ballroom to hear both Sir Denis and his wife address the clubs. Sir Denis was full of praise for Canada.

"You plan and build big, there is nothing mean or niggardly about it, it is like your hospitality," he said.

Sir Denis explained that the Lord Mayor is chosen once a year from among the 26 aldermen of the city of London and may not serve more than one year.

The aldermen themselves are chosen by city councillors and the position of Lord Mayor is more of an honor than anything else, something like a provincial lieutenant-governor in Canada.

Sir Denis also explained some 'Loving Cup' For B.C.

A 200-year-old solid silver "loving cup" presented to the people of B.C. by the city of London will be displayed in the legislative buildings rotunda shortly.

The presentation was made to Premier Bennett yesterday by the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Denis Truscott, and is a symbol of the bonds of friendship between the people of London and British Columbia.

The ornately decorated, two-handled cup was bought from an antique dealer in London recently for $150 but is valued at much more than that.

Sir Denis explained to the premier that the story behind loving cups dated back almost 1,000 years when Edward the Martyr was stabbed in the back while drinking.

People were so horrified at this type of murder that ever since that day when anyone drinks from a loving cup they must be with two companions, one standing back to back with the drinker and the other lifting the lid with his right hand.

"In that way the drinker cannot be stabbed," said Sir Denis.

Victoria gave the Lord Mayor of London a plastic paperweight containing a centennial silver dollar yesterday as a reminder of his visit.

The city's gift was presented to the Lord Mayor by Mayor Percy Scutcheon when Sir Denis visited the city hall and met Greater Victoria municipal leaders. Mayor Scutcheon also presented a print of dogwood to Lady Truscott.

New Shot Averts Hay Fever

NEW YORK (UPI)—A New York scientist has come up with a new type of hay fever shot described as 98 per cent effective.

It differs from the conventional anti-hay fever injections in two ways. Only one shot a year is needed in contrast to the from 15 to 70 annual injections of the old-type shots.

And it is made of mineral oil and ragweed extract. The shots now being used are made of a water base and extract.

Dr. Mary Lowless stressed that the medication is not now generally available and is still in the experimental stage.

Kidd Wins Support In Esquimalt

B.C. Conservative leadership candidate Dr. Desmond B. Kidd won a preliminary victory at Esquimalt Tuesday night.

Dr. Kidd, noted geologist and Vancouver grocery executive, will contest the leadership of Deane Finlayson at a Vancouver convention Sept. 11, 12 and 13.

U.S. Works Out Surrender Plan

Possibility

In Atom War

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators disclosed Wednesday night that President Eisenhower has ordered a top-to-bottom investigation of published reports that U.S. officials are studying the possibility of surrender by the United States in a future nuclear war.

One senator, who refused use of his name because he said the president and defense leaders had urged secrecy on the matter said:

"I've never seen the president so mad. He had not even heard of the rumor and he turned everything upside down in the Pentagon getting to the bottom of it."

The Senate source said Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy and Deputy Defense Secretary Donald A. Quarles had assured the president and Republican senators that "there is no thought or plan for surrender and the studies were only theoretical."

He added that the directive for the study had been made by John B. MacAuley, deputy assistant defense secretary for research and engineering, included the conditions under which either Soviet Russia or the U.S. might be forced to an overall study of all possible surrender.

Iranian Expert Tells West Off

GENEVA PARK, Ont. (CP)—A former Iranian politician startled the calm Couchiching conference Tuesday night with some blunt comments on the Middle East.

Said Dr. Nasrollah Fatemi on the staff of Fairleigh Dickinson University, Rutherford, N.J.: "Nasser is not perfect but he is 100 times better than King Hussein of Jordan or Premier Nuri Said of Iraq; the West has been protecting kings, queens and corrupt governments and there has been no contact with the people of the Middle East."

The annual week-long conference is sponsored by the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Relieving the Tension

PRESIDENT Eisenhower's address before the United Nations Assembly yesterday, with a six-point plan for working out Middle East differences, should do much to relieve international tension in a situation which had become acutely critical. It was a moderate solution that he proposed, within the framework of the United Nations and all the more welcome for that. Also it based the proposed solution on multilateral lines, as opposed to any nationalistic drive for power or claim for special privilege. To the Arab states the head of the United States' government was saying plainly that they must compose their own differences and out of their own resources begin to help themselves before they can expect international economic or other assistance on a long-term basis.

Coupled with Prime Minister Macmillan's prompt action in calling the propagandized bluff of the Soviet Union over the summit conference, the United States stand shows the West to be strongly united in a determination to stop this perpetual fomentation of incidents in a thinly disguised war of nerves. Within the terms of Mr. Eisenhower's formula there is a logical, reasonable and realistic proposal for the working out of Arab aspirations in the Middle East, as some of their leaders have been quick to recognize. A stand-by United Nations police force to replace national troops now patrolling the trouble spots; a Middle East development loan under Arab initiative and first contribution; UN action to stop inflammatory broadcasts in the whole region; and UN support of both Lebanon and Jordan until their internal stability is restored offer a modus vivendi within the competence of the United Nations.

Initial reaction to these developments in the United Nations Assembly has been favorable. There has been recognition of the fact that no great power on the Western side is attempting to lift the big stick. The call to Arab lands for self-control, with the pledge of United Nations attention and long-term economic help, was as urgently needed as it is manifestly sincere. The United Nations itself has been restored to its proper place in the discussion of international disagreements, and given a workable lead for the solution of the present over-heated dispute. Finally a united West is showing that its help is not on the barter block, but can only be earned. This is a long stride forward in the true cause of world peace.

Relief for Power Users

MAYOR Scurrah has advanced a strong argument for reduction of power and light rates in Greater Victoria in the event of the B.C. Electric withdrawing from the public transportation field. The company's own submissions in past appearances before the Public Utilities Commission are the best support the mayor could wish for.

In the determination of power and light rates the B.C. Electric, which originally used electricity to drive its public transportation system, has been treated as one operation although in every physical respect it is two distinct and unrelated operations which could — and many believe should — be conducted independently. Except in ownership and office management there is no longer any connection between an electric power supply system and a transport service. But under statutes regulating the B.C. Electric, the company is allowed to mark up profits in one division to offset losses in the other.

This to the average person makes no more sense than if a department store raised the prices of haberdashery to make good losses in the meat department. In a case such as that the customer could take his business elsewhere; but because of the monopoly enjoyed by the BCE the users of power and light cannot do that. They have to buy at rates set by the PUC high enough to cover the perennial losses incurred by the transport system. In short, householders and industry have to pay an excessive price for electricity so that bus passengers may travel at less than cost. That is a bargain for the bus users but a raw deal for the others.

The argument that power rates should be brought down if the BCE relinquishes its bus business would appear to be unanswerable. The reduction moreover should be substantial. By the company's own submission the bus division was run at a loss in Greater Victoria, last year, of close to half a million dollars and is expected to show a deficit of $600,000 this year. Rebated to the customers of the power and light division, that should enable the company to make a handsome cut in rates, which the public will, of course, expect to receive.

Unfortunately such a separation of operations would only aggravate the problem of bus fares unless the successor to the BCE in that field, if there is to be one, can run the service more cheaply than the BCE has done.

Tidbits Coming to Light

IT is no wonder former Finance Minister Abbott rolled up those huge annual surpluses; they were needed to hide the extravagances of the last Liberal government. Taxpayers have long suspected something of the kind, and one nice example is coming to light with the Commons committee inquiry into the printing bureau building in Hull, Quebec. By all accounts it, the building, is an outside case of undue liberality.

The federal government does printing in a big way and a big plant is necessary. Probably also the new one begun in 1948 was overdue. Even in these expensive days however a building that costs some $16,000,000 is a whopper, especially when it was estimated it would cost only $6,000,000. That is a fattening process in more ways than one. A tidbit however is that the air conditioning proved to be a flop, according to the present public works deputy, and had to be done over at heavy additional expense.

Some other intriguing items have been disclosed. The chief government architect says he was overruled when he objected to needless fancy materials. More important is his evidence that tenders were called against his advice even when complete plans and specifications were lacking. Sizable extras, also, were charged which apparently should have been included in the original contract.

There is no assertion of wrongdoing but there definitely seems to have been a consuming desire to get this building built, regardless of its cost. In a building that size there would obviously be much room for either prudent spending or careless extravagance. Prudent husbandry was not characteristic of the Liberals—"What is a million?" asked former minister Mr. Howe on a notable occasion—which helps to explain why taxes were kept so high.

One other thought occurs, and it involves the role of a chief government architect. The fee to date paid to the architect who designed this new national printing plant is around $500,000, and without prejudice that is a pretty respectable sum. One is apt to wonder however why there is such a post as a chief government architect if the holder's duties don't include the designing of government buildings.

Khrushchev Seeking Diversion

By K. C. THALER

United Press International

LONDON (UPI)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev has launched a new-type diplomatic offensive to win back the initiative lost by his backing-out of the summit, diplomatic sources said today.

On the eve of the United Nations General Assembly emergency session on the Middle East, he has embarked on an unprecedented all-out "vote-for-Khrushchev" campaign among small Western UN nations.

The essence of the new propaganda offensive is "lobbying by diplomatic note," its purpose to disrupt and undermine Western allegiances, in the view of Soviet affairs experts today.

Khrushchev, personally credited with the new strategy, was held desperately anxious to obtain the widest possible support in the United Nations against the U.S. and British Middle Eastern policies.

Some experts believed the Soviet leader was fighting a battle for survival.

The opening shot of the Soviet diplomatic offensive came last weekend with the dispatch of a new-type note to the Greek government urging it bluntly to support Soviet policy in the Middle East against Anglo-American "aggression."

Almost immediately afterwards, Moscow dispatched a similar letter to Stockholm asking the neutral Swedes for backing at the UN for Russia's Middle Eastern designs.

More notes of a similar nature were believed in preparation in the Kremlin's diplomatic workshop.

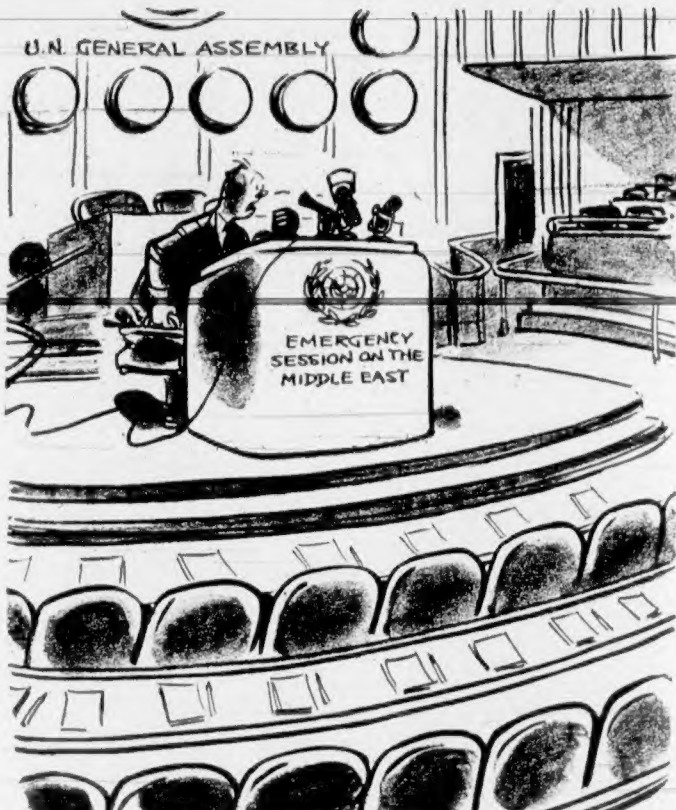

In the past, Moscow has sent notes of intimidation to smaller nations on the eve of major military developments in the West.

It had been Khrushchev's strategy to threaten smaller NATO nations on the eve of a NATO council meeting, or to warn members of the Baghdad and SEATO alliances just before they met in special conference on military and political decisions.

The new Khrushchev line seeks instead the support of Western-minded UN members with a mild mannered "Please-vote-for-me-because-the-Anglo-Americans-are-bad-boys" appeal, the sources said.

The full implications of the new strategy have not yet sufficiently emerged.

But both Soviet affairs experts and British diplomatic officials believed that Khrushchev was building up for a major propaganda show "with a difference."

"Testing—Aggressor! Imperialist! Assassin! Testing—"

Thinking Aloud Gerald Waring

"...of shoes—and ships—and sailing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IN an old film shown on TV the other evening Leslie Howard, in the role of a rather futile, introspective intellectual, asked Humphrey Bogart, playing the part of a hard-bitten, realistic gunman, if he had ever read "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Humphrey Bogart may have done so but the gunman he represented probably never even heard of it, so the question wasn't answered. And the philosophy Howard was expounding went up into the air and disappeared.

I was alerted by mention of Remarque's novel for I have always considered it highly over-praised. Three perusals at intervals of about a decade—to test my reaction as I grew older—have left me unimpressed. Perhaps a first-hand taste of what happens on western fronts made "All Quiet" seem no particular novelty, and besides I think the book slight in form and content. It simply mirrors a distaste for the horrors of war.

Even though the sturdy fathers of the Canadian Legion would seem to belie it, a neurosis settled on the immediate postwar years of the 1914-1918 conflict. Certainly it enmeshed the literati of that era. "All Quiet" reflected the disillusionment with war that pervaded Europe in particular following 1918. Siegfried Sassoon and Robert Graves were of a mind with Remarque, although more delicate penmen.

It is easy to look back, of course, but war never should in advance seem to be a picnic. The post-1918 nausea probably derived from the fact that for a 100 years previously wars had been something fought by professionals in faraway places. They could be enjoyed in history books for their color and adventure and heroic propensities. By contrast the 1914 show engulfed whole nations and brought the ordeal severely close to home.

The latter had also been fought on the theory of making the world "safe for democracy" and of lands "fit for heroes to live in" and not surprisingly such grandiose slogans are hard to live up to. Lack of their realization helped to form the malaise which made "All Quiet" a best-seller.

Another factor undoubtedly was the revelation of what went on behind the German lines. In every war what goes on behind front lines is very similar, but there is always curiosity about the other side. In the main this is what catapulted the Remarque books and film into prominence. The unknown is always mysterious and its disclosure accepted as spectacular.

The last war, even if we are still in the midst of its troubled aftermath, seems not to have generated the same maxima of self-pity. It was more deadly and horrible than the first one and much closer to home everywhere, yet the combatants emerged, on our side at least, with fewer ills about them. Perhaps this is because they went into it with their eyes more open. And if the 1939-1945 war novelists are a criterion there is much less soul-wringing than there was 25 years earlier. Paradoxically, you might say, the greater the horror, the more straight-eyed it was viewed. Either that or a quarter of a century bred a generation with tougher mental fibre; which, international events being what they are, is a jolly good thing.

Reports from Ottawa

THIS is a tale of two committees. One: estimates. The other: public accounts.

The Commons' estimates committee was to have been the watchdog of Parliament, forestalling waste and extravagance, pointing out how spending could be shaved and tax dollars saved.

The committee finished its work last week, after 25 sittings. Nowhere in its report did it make a specific recommendation to reduce the amount of money requested by the government for defence and defence production.

A leading Tory member of the committee told me they didn't want to embarrass Defence Minister Peakes or Production Minister Hurley with the choice of accepting cuts or opposing committee recommendations. A most considerate watchdog!

The committee probed—is that the word?—the CF-105 program and approved the spending of $175,000,000 on further development of this jet interceptor in 1958-59. The committee certainly was aware that Peakes will be deciding this fall whether to continue the program or junk it. The CCF members of the committee had asked that Lt. Gen. Guy Simonds, former chief of the general staff, and Maj. Gen. W. H. S. Macklin, former adjutant-general, be called to testify. Both are widely known for their denunciation of the CF-105 as a waste of money. They were not called.

The public accounts committee deals with money already spent. Its job is to ensure that the government used funds in the ways Parliament intended. So, of course, this year's committee is dealing with spending by the former Liberal government.

In a seeming gesture of magnanimity, the government offered to accept a Liberal as chairman of the committee. Usually government MPs head all committees. After some consideration, even hesitation, the Liberals accepted and assigned the post to Alan Macnaughton, MP for Mount Royal, Que.

However, the government delayed so long in setting up the committee that this Tuesday's meeting was only the committee's second work session. Obviously it is not going to get very far, with Aug. 23 being the government's target for the end of the session.

Indeed, the committee is not likely to get further than a probe into the construction of the $16,000,000 National Printing Bureau—a task which Prime Minister Diefenbaker assigned to it in another departure from established practice.

Heading a committee with a Tory majority, Macnaughton had no choice. So the committee tackled this project born in the morass of patronage and incompetence that was the Department of Public Works in the years when Alphonse Fournier was minister. That was before the last Liberal works minister, Robert H. Winters, cleaned out this Augean stable on instructions from Louis St. Laurent.

Thus Diefenbaker is reaching back five to 10 years in an apparent effort to pin a scandal on the Liberals. He may well succeed—helped by the guise of impartiality given to the committee by Macnaughton's chairmanship. David Walker, Toronto MP who is one of Diefenbaker's closest confidants, is cast in the role of prosecuting attorney.

Already, in one day's sitting, the committee has unearthed evidence of Liberal bungling, stupidity, carelessness and questionable business practices. Whether it will find proof of dishonesty and skulduggery, the essential ingredients for a major scandal, remains to be seen.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

UNLIKE most of us whose summer cottages are on 300-foot frontages of lake or stream, or else crowded up on 50-foot frontages like city homes, a friend of mine, years ago, bought a backwoods farm that had gone derelict and abandoned, but which had half a mile of beautiful shoreline.

Since this was a straight purchase, with deed and all, nobody could complain of his possession when the lake in due time became a thriving summer colony. And in due time, too, tourists in their cruisers and boats began to throng the area. And they were in the habit of assuming that the beautifully kept property was Crown land, and they landed on it, and camped, and roamed far inland from the legal road allowance, as it is called, along the shore, though no road is possible or conceivable on its steep rocks and inlets.

All manner of trespass signs, fences and other devices to keep the property private were of no avail until the owner thought up this sign, which he distributed along the shore:

"This is private property on which taxes are paid. Kindly extend to it the same respect you demand for your own property."

That did the trick. Hardly anybody has trespassed since, except the propertyless.

The Law and Logic

(From The Edmonton Journal)

AS anyone who has followed court cases can testify, the administration of justice can sometimes become a little confusing for the layman. Logic, precedent, technicalities and all the rest are called in to play their parts, and success often awaits the clever man, learned in the law, who knows the right way to proceed.

In London recently an elderly retired lieutenant-colonel was fined five pounds for driving "without due care and attention." His licence was suspended until he could take a new test.

Defence counsel pointed out that the colonel's home was 10 miles away. Would the court give permission for him to drive home? Certainly not, said the judge, no one may drive while his licence is under suspension. The lawyer had an inspiration: could the judge postpone sentence for a half-hour? His honor could—and did. The colonel's driver's licence expired just as his car rolled up to the gates of his town house.

The Two Chinas

Khrushchev's Dilemma

By W. N. EWER, from London

MR. Khrushchev's aerobatic diplomacy leaves the onlooker a little bewildered by the speed with which he twists and turns and changes position. His own people bewildered, while communist parties all over the world need all their agility to keep in step with their leader.

Consider the record of the past weeks.

On Wednesday, July 23, he had written to Prime Minister Macmillan completely accepting the proposal for a special meeting of the Security Council, attended by heads of government who would also be able to have informal meetings outside the council chamber. The acceptance was quite definite. "We share your views," he wrote, "concerning the approach to a discussion of this question (the Middle East) at a special meeting of the Security Council."

But in a matter of five days Mr. Khrushchev had begun to edge out of his acceptance. On Monday, July 28, he accused the British and American governments of making difficulties and causing delays. And he reverted to his earlier proposal, which he had apparently abandoned, of a five-power (the United States, Britain, Russia, France and India) meeting of heads of government in Europe.

The reasons he gave do not bear examination. The charge that the British and U.S. governments were now proposing to hand the whole matter over to a usual meeting of the Security Council is simply not true. The objection that the Security Council had discussed the situation for a long time, but had not "decided anything" came strangely from the head of a government which had, by use of its veto, prevented decisions by all the other ten members.

Clearly these were not the real reasons, which remained obscure and puzzling until we learned later that the Soviet premier's next move was a swift and secret visit to Peking for consultation with Mao Tse-tung. Here surely is the key to the puzzle and the explanation of the later manoeuvres.

Mao, at some moment between July 23 and July 28, must have registered the strongest possible protest against his ally's decision to take part personally in a meeting of heads of government in the Security Council, of which Communist China is not a member but of which the regime in Formosa is. Mao would not have Khrushchev sit down with Chang or his representative.

The protest was strong enough to compel Khrushchev to draw back and to fly to Peking to discuss the whole question of summit meetings.

Khrushchev and Mao met and talked for four days. At the end, they issued a statement calling for an immediate meeting of heads of government of "the great powers." It is a significant phrase. For in a document signed by Mao, "the great powers" can only have one meaning. It includes Communist China.

Khrushchev was in an awkward dilemma. He could not afford to quarrel with Mao. On the other hand, he could not, at this stage, suddenly produce a new and obviously impossible condition—the participation of Communist China. There could be no summit without Peking; there could be no summit with Peking. The only escape was to scrap the whole idea of a new summit for the present and to suggest something else.

Hence the latest volte-face: the reversion to the idea of a Special Assembly. It would be acceptable to the Western powers, for the U.S. representative on the council had already called for an Assembly meeting on July 18 and had only left his motion in suspense because of the Russian call for a summit. Mao would presumably raise no objection since this involved no new precedent. And he has no doubt been given a promise that the Soviet delegation would take the opportunity to raise the whole question of Chinese representation very forcibly.

And so, adroitly enough, Mr. Khrushchev has extricated himself from the predicament into which he had blundered.

But he has done so at a heavy price. His personal prestige as a "strong man" has been badly damaged. The doctrine that the "camp of socialism" is "under the leadership of the great Soviet Union" has been rudely shaken.

'Could Have Prevented Offence'

Lawyer Rebukes Police

A defence lawyer suggested in city police court yesterday that the driver of a police ambulance carrying a man in insulin shock to hospital could have stopped to halt a speeding car.

Suggestion was made by David Hummel, defending Margaret Goode, 1323 Coventry Street, against a charge of careless driving. She was involved in an accident at the intersection of Bay and Government Streets about 6 p.m. July 25 while following the police ambulance which was carrying her husband.

SAW OTHER CAR
Const. Gordon Bennett told the court he drove a police patrol car to 1323 Coventry Street where he found Mr.

Goode in what appeared to be insulin shock.

On the way to St. Joseph's Hospital, Const. Bennett said, he noticed another car about 200 feet behind the police vehicle, appearing to follow it. At the time he was moving quickly with both siren and red flashing lights in use.

"As I approached the intersection of Bay and Government the light was amber and as I entered it the light turned red," he said.

GRAVE DANGER

Cross-examined by Mr. Hummel, Const. Bennett said he felt the car which appeared to be following him constituted a grave danger to other road users, but did not stop as he left Mr. Goode was in danger.

To a further question, Const. Bennett said he felt insulin shock was a serious thing.

He denied that he had given Mrs. Goode permission to follow the police vehicle on the way to the hospital.

PORTUGUESE FIND

St. Helena, British crown colony in the South Atlantic, was discovered by a Portuguese navigator in 1502.

Gordon-Leishman McQuarrie, 321 Kamloops, driver of the other car involved in the accident, told the court he moved ahead along Government when the ambulance was "clear and the light had turned to green."

"About the middle of the intersection I saw this car bearing down on me. There was nothing I could do," he said.

He said he had not looked to either side before moving off. He told the court he had waited some 15 seconds after the light changed before he put his car in motion.

Mrs. Goode was remanded until this morning to allow an expert witness to give evidence about the phasing of the lights at the intersection.

LABATT'S PILSENER IS HERE! NOW....

In the subtle lingering taste, characteristic of a true pilsener, you'll discover the difference between Labatt's and other Canadian beers.

Months of exacting tests have ensured that LABATT'S PILSENER brewed in B.C. is precisely the same as the world famous product of the company's Ontario and Quebec breweries. Labatt's authentic pilsener recipe was obtained in 1950 from Herr Roman Vecovsky, brewmaster of the Pilsen Brewery, Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, birthplace of the world's most famous beer. A special strain of genuine European pilsener yeast further assures the true taste of pilsener. The light appearance preferred by Canadians is achieved by the use of Canadian barley. LABATT'S PILSENER is the only beer in the world endorsed by the brewmasters of seven leading European breweries.

Finlayson

CLOVERDALE (CP)—Provincial Progressive Conservative leader Deane Finlayson charged the government with "fantasmatism, dishonesty" when he addressed a PC meeting here Tuesday.

Mr. Finlayson and PC leadership aspirant Dr. D. F. Kidd lashed out at the government at a meeting at which delegates to the Conservative convention in September were chosen.

The Conservative leader said the government was dishonest in its financial manipulation "using as a main appeal that it had gotten the people out of debt."

"Instead of which, it is a matter of record that our liabilities are jumping higher and higher," Mr. Finlayson said.

He charged that the PGE instead of paying its way each year was "going in the hole annually to the tune of $2,000,000 to $3,000,000."

Dr. Kidd said that legislation in Victoria is by regulation with the reins of authority becoming increasingly centralized.

He accused the government of poor handling and cited the lack of road preparation for the almost-completed Deas Island tunnel.

Garden Notes

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

It is rather disconcerting to look at the calendar and see how the summer is slipping away. We've had grand weather and a wonderful growing season, if a bit on the dry side, but already the days are getting shorter, and we are almost at the date for the final sowing of vegetable seeds in the open.

One last sowing of small table turnips should be made within the next two weeks or so, preferably on a plot from which early potatoes have been dug.

With all the cultivating and earthing up which has taken place on the potato plot, all it needs is to be raked level, trividen firm, and raked again before putting in the seeds. Early Six Weeks and Purple Top Milan are good varieties for sowing at this time.

After the end of this month, it is a gamble to sow the orange-fleshed turnips with any idea of getting roots for winter use. However, turnip seed of any kind can go in right up to the end of September, not for the turnips, but for their green tops, which make especially good greens for late winter and early spring.

One test of a good gardener is his ability to supply his family with mature, ripened onions in July, for this month is the "hungry gap" with onions. Last year's crop is used up or has gone soft in storage, while this year's plants are still growing strongly, with no sign of ripening.

Sometimes you can pull it off by spring as the weather permits, or you can sow seeds this month in a well-prepared bed which hasn't been freshly or heavily manured.

The seedlings are surprisingly hardy, but they must be watched and guarded against weeds and slugs through the winter months, and transplanted into rich soil next March, spacing them six inches apart in rows a foot apart.

Given ordinary attention, these should be fully grown and ripened by July, while during the spring months, the same sowing will provide a good supply of green onions for salads. Giant Rocca and Autumn Spice Hybrid are good varieties for this treatment, and don't forget to dust the seeds with DDT or heptachlor to protect the young onions against soil-inhabiting pests.

In our family, we always make a sowing between the middle of August and Labor Day of a stump-rooted early carrot such as Nantes Half-long. It is a bit of a chore, to keep this late-sown carrot row clear through the cool, damp days of fall, when weeds reward on Christmas Day, when the finger-size baby carrots are pulled to add something special to our Christmas dinner. Some years we have had to sweep the snow away to get at them.

Unless you have clothes or a cold-frame, it isn't much use trying to get head lettuce to stand through the winter, although I have had Sweet-heart as late as Dec. 15th. A good substitute, though, is Lamb's lettuce, sometimes called corn salad. A sowing made before the end of this month will furnish leaves for salads right up to the time the plants start running to seed next May. The seeds are rather hard to come by, but some of the local agents for English seed houses may have them.

The Viewing World

Old Movie Stocks Running Out

By John Crosby

But No One's Bothering To Look Beyond 1960

The film industry has made a lot of movies in the past forty-odd years. This is something that TV is quite familiar with. Most of the independent stations couldn't survive today without Hollywood, as a matter of fact. And the film buyers for "The Late Show," "The Late, Late Show," "The Five Star Movies," "The Twilight Theatre," "The Early Show," and "Marinee Movie" can also testify to this. Yes, sir, there were a lot of movies made, all right.

The question that occurs to me—and well it might as I restlessly turn my dial these summer evenings for something new to view and find instead, Wallace Beery and Helen Twelvetrees facing me in aged celluloid splendor over and over again—how many feature films are there left in the coffers of Hollywood? Even with a probable agreement being reached to release the post-'48 films and a myriad of press releases announcing the fact that "fourteen markets have just purchased 52 of 'Our Gang' comedies," it doesn't seem to me that the supply will be everlasting.

I remember a reader's letter on the subject where he suggested that perhaps the TV networks might have something akin to the "Top Ten Tunes" only using movies instead. All I could visualize at this point was "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Son of Lussac" competing for first place for weeks and weeks until the public—unless they had by this time thrown out their sets—demanded something like "Our Gang" comedy to relieve the monotony.

It was this dreary possibility which led me to call up a few people in film sales at various networks and put the question to them.

They weren't worried for the most part. One optimist said that as soon as the post-'48s were released there would be even more films. As it is now, all the networks have film libraries of about 1,000 films. "We can show them 10 times each over a long period of time. We aren't worried yet," said a salesman at CBS. "Of course, I don't know how the small stations feel—they depend on movies more than we do."

Does the late viewer expect good movies? I asked. "They'd have to, I figured, to make it through the 300-odd spot commercials." He told me, rather casually, I thought, that out of 10 pictures, maybe two are worthwhile. "We have to save the good ones to stick in between the bad ones. There are a lot of bad ones."

Supposing, I probed, you showed all the bad ones, all the good ones and even the ones which haven't been released, don't you think by 1960 that you'll eventually be running out? After all, Hollywood isn't producing them so fast any more.

He agreed, but seemed fairly certain that networks and stations would be eternally trading their individual film libraries. "We'll keep showing them over and over again until the insomnia screams." And then? Then, he assured me, they would turn to half-hour films, the ones turned out with the rapidity of postage stamps by such companies as Ziv. "We'll just substitute half-hour films in the big cities until the public forgets what it's seen. Then, we'll bring the same old features back."

The fact that half-hour films would be a dreadful prospect did not seem to occur to any of them. They did agree that things would be pretty thin by 1960, but they seemed to think that was a long way off. It seems pretty close to me.

Teachers Defy Threats

'We're Not Scared'

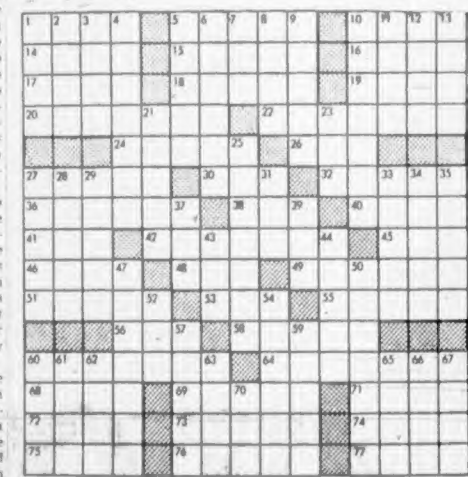

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Relations between teachers and school trustees have had an unusual amount of friction during the last year, the Canadian Teachers' Federation was told yesterday.

Secretary George G. Crockery of Ottawa told the federation's 37th annual conference that events of the last year have shown teachers' organizations "will not be frightened or stampeded into acceptance of unfair settlements by threats of concerted action by trustees."

He reported that federation membership has reached 90,000, a gain of 6,000 over last year. Tuesday night president George Roberts of Oshawa told the convention that large numbers of unqualified persons equipment.

Government authorities were glossing over the realities and tugging the public into a false sense of complacency. "Such measures defeated teachers' at self-improvement from poor salaries and

Vancouver Racing U.S. Sails for Sceptre? Results, Entries

NEW YORK (AP) — The Sceptre, its skipper admitted today, has "one or two" sails of United States manufacture. But the skipper, obviously somewhat flustered, declined to discuss the matter further. The Sceptre is the British yacht here to try to take the America's Cup, symbol of world yachting supremacy, from the U.S. a track 16 previous challengers have failed to accomplish in the last 107 years.

The skipper is handsome 34-year-old Lt. Cmdr. Graham Mann.

Cmdr. Mann said except for the couple of sails and some French-made nylon spinnakers, the Sceptre is British all the way. American sailcloth is considered by most yachtsmen to be somewhat superior to its British equivalent.

FILL IN YOUR BALLOT FOR FREE CALLING
between Sidney, Keating and Greater Victoria

The ballot sent to you in the mail a few days ago gives you the choice of which type of telephone system you would prefer when automatic service is introduced to the Sidney and Keating exchanges early next year.

Your vote will decide whether you will have a localized system, with all inter-exchange calls placed through operators, and with a charge on each call, or a system whereby you pay the same rates as Victoria subscribers and enjoy free inter-exchange calling through the entire Saanich Peninsula and Greater Victoria area.

Because the company must plan and engineer now for one system or the other, you, the subscriber, must make the decision on which type of telephone service you will have in your area for many years ahead.

Transit Buyers Need to Find Millions More

VANCOUVER (CP)—B.C. Transit Limited, which wants to buy B.C. Electric's transit system, has to find another $8,000,000 to $9,000,000 to make up the asking price.

The disclosure was made when you are willing to lose Tuesday by Harry Purdy, B.C.E. $7,000,000 to get out? Dr. Purdy said $20,000,000 is more than the actual price, but the discount figure was about right. The offer was not for the entire transit system, but only the buses.

He said that as recently as three weeks ago, negotiations for the sale of the system "had lapsed completely."

B.C. Transit is headed by former U.S. Air Force Gen. Timothy J. Manning.

Ald. Earle Adams noted that the system was valued at $27,000,000 by the Public Utilities Commission, but the company was reported willing to sell for $20,000,000.

"Is that figure correct?" he asked. And if so, why are you willing to make a $7,000,000 discount? And how are you able to interest a sane businessman Aug. 23

Motor Shut Off By Liquor Taster

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—An electronic atmosphere-caster that shuts off an automobile engine at a hint of alcohol—has introduced yesterday by its inventor.

Holweg Eide, 32, a radio technician, said the device would also react to narcotics and carbon monoxide. In the case of deadly carbon monoxide it would start the horn blowing as well.

Eide said his invention, connecting rods an infrared lamp, a photoelectric cell and a maze of relays, could be adjusted to tell the car if the driver had merely tasted alcohol or if he had drunk enough to be dangerous.

The said the gadget would detect alcohol on the driver's breath even if the car windows were open, but that drunken passengers would not set it in operation.

Growing touch of the device which took 13 years to perfect. The driver cannot switch off the gadget once it has been installed.

Fleeing Fledgling Has Rough Landing

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—An Oklahoma school boy with only a kindergarten knowledge of airplane mechanics, fled a Georgia school bus yesterday for a home-made flying machine.

The 11-year-old boy, who is named "Vic," was seen by a police officer on the highway near Daytona Beach, Fla., where he was found by a police officer.

Word said he thought he was on his way to Kentucky, but that he realized he was in Florida when he flew low enough to read the highway signs. Ward said the boy had a "very rough landing" when he crashed at the edge of the Daytona Beach airport.

Vic West Group Weighs Tax Bill

A meeting of Victoria West Community Center has been called for 8 p.m. Friday to discuss the imposition of $172.75 school tax on the community.

The new Municipal Act in force at Edward and Catherine, "We can't afford it," said the president Charles Bonfield. "We are having this meeting to see what action we will take, whether it is worthwhile keeping up the hall or seeking a vote, or what else we can do."

Toilets Unscrubbed, Garbage Overflows

Central Saanich council heard a bitter complaint about conditions at Island View Beach when Mrs. M. W. Little, 60, said:

Fewer Need Benefits

A total of $3,264,993.35 was paid out in unemployment insurance benefits in the Pacific region during the month of July, figures released by regional director Horace Knoch, showed yesterday.

Victoria share of the total was $270,991.30.

The figure for the region was a drop from the $4,189,657.37 paid out for the previous month.

The report gave a gain in employment as the cause of the decrease in benefit payments. It said there were approximately 20 per cent fewer looking for work at the end of July than at the beginning of the month.

Workmen Rescued After Spill

QUEBEC (UPI)—A scaffold hanging underneath the half-mooned Island of Orleans Bridge upset under the weight of 22 painters early yesterday, spilling seven men into shallow muddy waters of the St. Lawrence River.

All seven were rescued by fellow workers who lowered themselves down ropes into the three-foot-deep water to wade to their aid. Three of the seven men were seriously injured by the 43-foot fall.

The other 13 men managed to cling to the upset scaffolding when it tilted crazily after a heavy wooden beam snapped under their weight.

Naden to Get More Homes

Five new homes for married RCN officers and their families are to be constructed at VIMS Naden.

Tenders were called yesterday, returnable Sept. 2, for the five housing units. They will be constructed in the area of the 21 units now at Naden, back of the officer's wardroom.

The RCN has 23 other units for officers at Signal Hill and eight at HMCS Dockyard.

Drinking, Feasting, Dancing

Talks at Summit Were Fun In Good King Henry's Day

BANGOR, Me., (UPI)—When the Frenchmen arrived at the summit conferences, they may not be with their families, but they can they wear directly to Hampton.

That was the year Cardinal Wolsey and King Henry VIII of England held open house for royal delegations from France. The purpose was to get the French to sign a treaty of "Perpetual Peace" — Cardinal Wolsey's idea.

Instead of "Perpetual Peace," however, the purpose seemed more like perpetual drinking, dining and dancing. Both Wolsey and Henry threw their own parties for the guests and carried all kinds of pleasures on their generosity.

On the way to Kentucky, but that he realized he was in Florida when he flew low enough to read the highway signs. Ward said the boy had a "very rough landing" when he crashed at the edge of the Daytona Beach airport.
